EATING

Oxford offers a wide choice of restaurants and eateries in the city centre and nearby districts.

A quick lunch can be gathered on Broad St., or Little Clarendon St., at a few minute walk from the Martin School. You can also explore the Covered Market on Cornmarket St. for a cosier option.

The city is not short of option for dinner: you can enjoy a traditional meal in almost all the pubs in Oxford; please take note that dining time are generally earlier than in the continent, and most of the premises stop serving food at around 9:30pm.

Ethnic options – as diverse as Indian, Chinese, Italian, Levantine, Greek and French – can be found on Walton St. in the Jericho district. George St. has also a selection of restaurants, including American-style burgers.

Cowley Rd. is at a 15 minutes walk from the city centre: there you will find Oxford's ethnic district, with a good choice of restaurants – Greek, Russian, Italian pizza, and Japanese among them.
